Fourteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

July 8, 2018

“Our eyes are fixed on the Lord, pleading for his mercy.”

Both Jesus and Ezekiel have a tough time preaching today. Jesus was dismissed because the people could not accept that this seemingly ordinary neighbor could teach them about God. Ezekiel had to preach to a people who had rebelled against God and were “obstinate of heart.” Perhaps Saint Paul’s insight is most helpful here: it is when God’s grace allows me to overcome my own weakness that Christ’s power is most truly revealed. May we have the humility to allow God’s grace to strengthen us.

Pastoral Reflection

Suffering for Christ

In serving the Lord, we may find that we are rejected by those closest to us. We may suffer hardships for simply trying to do what is right. Jesus encourages us in these moments. He reminds us that our suffering is not meaningless. In experiencing hurt and isolation, we also come to realize our own limitations, our weaknesses, and our need for God's help. This is the beginning of true maturity in faith.

Like an attentive gardener, God prunes us of the need to seek the approval of others—God rids us of our pride. When we no longer are dependent on the approval of others we become freer to seek God's approval. When God's approval is what our heart seeks, we begin to see the world as God does and have a more accurate understanding of our role in it.

Dependency on the approval of others is a form of pride, which distorts reality, making us less resilient. To suffer for Christ also means to be healed from our pride. We must remember that in our sufferings we remain in good company. Many of the saints suffered slander and persecution by those closest to them. Intimacy with the Lord means we will share in his suffering; but we will also share in greater freedom—and, ultimately, joy.
